Cancel Culture vs Grace Culture

Creating a balance between them

By Minister Naomi Njoki, CHRISCO Central Youth Nairobi

The Question We Cannot Dodge

Culture is the shared beliefs, values and customs of a group, and the way a group treats someone who has fallen tells you more than any statement of faith.

How do we hold one another accountable for wrong doing without denying the possibility of redemption? That is the question this series keeps returning to.

Cancel Culture

A collective withdrawing of support from someone because of what they said or what they did. At institutional level it can serve public accountability. Left unchecked it becomes a crowd that enjoys the fall.

Grace Culture

The free, unmerited favour of God. Grace does not excuse sin and does not cancel consequence. It opens the way back for whoever will walk it, and it keeps that way open longer than our patience does.

Truth about the sin. Mercy for the sinner.

Scripture never lets us keep one and forget the other. It exposes the works of darkness and still refuses to make a spectacle of the person standing in it.

Six Things We Must Hold

Distinctions the church loses at its own cost.

Forgiveness Is Not Trust

You can forgive someone who betrayed you without handing them access to your life again. Trust is rebuilt over time.

Grace Is Not the Absence of Consequence

The one who steals may be forgiven and still return what was taken. A repentant leader may still face discipline.

Restoration Is Not Reinstatement

Being received back is not the same as being handed the old position, the old platform or the keys that afternoon.

Mercy Must Not Erase the Victim

Care for the person who was hurt belongs in the same sentence as mercy for the one who hurt them.

Safety, Justice and Boundaries Matter

Boundaries are not a failure of love. Protection and honest process are how love behaves in public.

Discipline and Mercy Must Coexist

Forgiveness and justice are compatible. The cross is the proof. The line between accountability and bullying is thin.

What the Scriptures Say

Grace is not the absence of correction and correction is not the absence of grace. God's word exposes wrongdoing and still protects the person.

Matthew 18:15 to 17

Point out the fault between the two of you alone. Private first, witnesses only then, the wider circle last, and every step aimed at winning them back.

1 Corinthians 5:1 to 13

The unrepentant sinner is removed from the assembly so that his spirit may be saved. Discipline with a redemptive end, never a spiteful one.

Ephesians 5:11

Have nothing to do with the unfruitful works of darkness, but instead expose them. Grace does not tolerate serious wrong indefinitely.

Proverbs 28:13

Whoever conceals transgressions does not prosper; whoever confesses and forsakes them finds mercy. Confession is the doorway mercy walks through.

2 Corinthians 2:6 to 8

Forgive and comfort the person who has been disciplined, so that he is not overwhelmed by excessive sorrow.

Two commands, one church

The God who says remove that person also says forgive and comfort him. Read them together, or you will keep a discipline that cannot restore and a mercy that cannot correct.

The G R A C E Framework

Six practical steps for accountability with grace, usable on a Tuesday night.

G

Get the Facts

Before you speak, before you post, before you withdraw. Answering before you listen is folly (Proverbs 18:13). Hear both sides.

R

Recognise the Harm

Name what was done and who it cost. Do not minimise it for comfort and do not inflate it for effect.

A

Accountability Remains

Appropriate consequences still apply to everyone. Love does not waive them; it walks through them with you.

C

Choose Compassion

Challenge the wrong doing without dehumanising the wrong doer. Nobody is the worst thing they have done.

E

Encourage Genuine Change

Look for evidence of repentance: changed behaviour and a willingness to make amends.

+

Make Room for Restoration

Without rushing it. Restoration is a road, not an event, and the pace of it is not ours to set.

Balance in Practice

We must learn the difference between public shaming and public accountability. These are the checks we keep applying to ourselves.

Private First, Public Last

Confrontation follows Matthew 18: one person, then two or three, then the church. Skipping to the crowd is not courage.

Exposing Is Not a Licence for Rumour

Calling wrongdoing into the light never authorises gossip, screenshots shared for sport, or half a story told loudly.

Do Not Be Selective

Do not be picky about what you count as moral. The standard that convicts your rival must also convict you.

The Goal Is Restoration

Not the satisfaction of watching someone fall. If you are quietly hoping for the fall, check your own heart first.

Do Not Repay Evil for Evil

Romans 12:17. The cycle stops with us. Refuse to answer a wrong with a bigger wrong and call that justice.

Truth and Grace Together

We serve a God who calls sin what it is, who confronts wrongdoing, and who still offers mercy to those who repent.

THE HEART OF THE MATTER

What would Jesus do?

He ate with the people the crowd had already written off, and He told them to go and sin no more. He did not pretend the sin was small and He did not make an example of the sinner.

We are more than our worst moment

The same grace we celebrate when God extends it to us must shape how we treat one another. That is the balance this series argues for: honest about the sin, open to the sinner, slow to join the crowd.

For the youth church, and for anyone who has been counted out

Bring the whole story on Tuesday. Nothing you have done disqualifies you from this teaching, and nothing done to you excuses it.

Set Your Mind on Things Above

Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things. For you have died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God.

Colossians 3:2 to 3

To set your mind on things above is to stop letting a fluctuating, noisy and contradictory world dictate how you feel about yourself.

Hidden, not from others

When your identity is rooted in who Jesus is and what He has done, rather than in what you dig up inside yourself, you live life to its truest.

Protected by Christ

When you hide your identity in Christ it is not hidden from other people; it is protected by Christ. No verdict and no committee of one writes the final sentence about you.

Two places to live

In the verdict of the crowd, or in the verdict of God. The crowd changes its mind by Thursday. The Father has already said what He says about you, and He does not revisit it for applause.

You are not cancelled by your worst chapter.

Confession is how the chapter ends. Restoration is what follows it.

Over to You

A few things to carry into the week.

Reflect

1. If the Bible calls us to confront sin, at what point does confrontation become condemnation?
2. When someone falls, what do I feel first: grief for them, or the small pleasure of being proved right?
3. Who have I already written off that God is still pursuing, and what would it cost me to believe He can still reach them?

Assignment for next Tuesday

Answer all three in writing, in one page. Then do one of these before you meet again: send the message you should have sent, return what you took, or sit with the person nobody else is speaking to.

This we believe, and this we will keep saying

Memorise

The goal is restoration, not the satisfaction of watching another person fall.

Grace is not the absence of consequence, and consequence is not the absence of grace.

Pray for both of them

Pray for the one who did the wrong, that God would really change them. Pray for the one who was hurt, that God would really heal them.

You Are Welcome Here

Treasure Tuesdays

Every Tuesday, youth fellowship at CHRISCO Central, Nairobi. All are welcome, and the doors open fifteen minutes before we start.

The balance this book argues for

Honest about the sin and open to the sinner. Slow to join the crowd, quick to restore, serious about wrong doing and more serious about the person who made the mistake.
